FRIDAY MORNING MARCH 31, 1976. CUSTER made a gallant picture, as it were, with his velvet jacket and long hair during the war, when he was known as the beauz sobreur of the army. He makes snother kind of a picture now, however, with his long tongue and velvet stories.

THE KU Klux triumph in Mississippi is now complete. Gevernor Ames, for some reason best known to himself, has resigned. and the government of the State has passed into the hands of the White Liners. The explanation of this unexpected step on his part is yet to come: but it is not improbable that he took it for the purpose of avoiding the penalty of disfranchisement and ineligibility which would have followed from his conviction under the articles of impeachment preferred against him.

THE friends of the adventurer, D. H. Chamberlain, are at present busily engaged at an attempt to blackmail the South Carolina Republicans into sending him as a delegate to the Cincinnati convention. They act upon the hypothesis that because Chamberlain has temporarily laid aside his role as a corrupt lobby ist and prates so loudly for reform he is too influential for the party to slight his claims as a candidate. The following extract from a letter addressed to a member of Congress from South Carolina by a prominent Republican in that State fully explains the Chamberlain tactics:

"Chamberlain and his friends are industriously circulating the report that the Governor has been invited by the Republican Congres-sional committee at Washington to head a bolting delegation to Cincinnati, with the assurance that under no circumstances would the committee favor the seating of a regular delegation composed of such men as Elliott, Gienves, Jillson and others."

We positively state that no such intimahas been given the man Chamberlain or any of his friends. The fact is that the indecent antecedents of Chamberlain create the hope that he will not be sent to Cincinnati as a delegate, and South Carolina had far better be unrepresented there than to send this creature. The party remembers how he has been catering to the worst prejudices of the rebel Democracy, and he has recently been made so odious to the masses of the North that his presence at Cincinnati would work serious detriment to party prospects. Chamberlain has been recently shown up in his true colors, and we advise South Carolina Republicans to leave him severely alone, thus giving him an insight to the insignificance to which he will be remanded in November next.

Ir is becoming evident to the most tuse minds that the House of Representatives has made a great, if not a ludlerous mistake in its recent attempt to ride a twohorse act in the case of Mr. Hallett Kilbourn. If he is guilty of a misdemeanor, as the law defines his offense, then the court only has the right and the power to determine it. He has an undoubted right to a trial by jury, as guaranteed by the Constitution. The House is as much amenable to the Constitution as are the courts and the Executive. The law of Congress is mandatory upon the presiding oftieers of the Houses as to certifying cases like that of Mr. Kilbourn to the judiciary. If these Houses intend to enforce their claim to higher priv ileges, they should at least repeal chapter seven of the Revised Statutes. There can certainly be no dual jurisdiction in the case. If Mr. Kilbourn is in contempt of the House, after having been certified to the jurisdiction of the court, then also is the House in contempt of the court for disobedience of its process. To hold to the contrary is to set up the will of the House above the Constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof by the two Houses and the approval of the Executive. It is to trample under foot the dearest rights of citizenship-trial by jury and the writ of habeas corpus. Will any one pretend that a single House of Congress has this power? Can any line of precedents, however long, give it such power? Was not the passage of chapter seven of the Revised Statutes a tacit yielding of all pretense to such power of privilege?

MISBEPRESENTATION CORRECTED.

The weakness of a cause is always most plainly shown when misrepresentation is resorted to to sustain it. The opponents of the Texas and Pacific railroad bill and the jackals of Jay Gould have relied on hard, barefaced lying to carry their point. The latest instance of this kind is an article in the New York Nation, which tells or pretends to tell about the branches prowided for in the Texas and Pacific bill. It says that there are three branches-one from Shreveport to New Orleans, three hundred miles long; one from the same place to Vicksburg, three hundred miles long, and one from Jefferson, Texas, to Memphis, three hundred miles long. A very superficial knowledge of geography would have shown the Nation that the distance from Shravaport to New Orleans is Ehreveport to Vicksburg only one hundred and fifty, and from Jefferson, Texas, to Momphis, Tenn., only two hundred and when no allegation of wrong-doing exists fifty miles, which lessens its figures against this "pool?" two hundred and fifty miles. This is a mere bagateile to such men as Jay Goult', who evidently inspired the article; but it is a matter of some interest to the general public, who desire to be released from the despotism of Jay Gould's monopoly and to have a route across the continent that can be traveled at all seasons of the year. Such an error in geography can be overlooked in a newspaper which adds up three times three and four and makes twelve of But such displays of ignorance and stupidity or falsehood do not inspire confidence in the paper that is guilty of them.

The same article says the friends of the Texas and Pacific bill are afraid to bring before Congress. The Nation, it knows anything, which we are disposed to doubt, ought to know that the delay in bringing forward the Texas and Pacific bill is more attributable to that "car load of money" which Jay Gould's friends boasted they would use, and a portion of which was so judiciously expended in the Virginia Legislature, than to any other cause. The friends of the Texas and Pacific bill are anxious for that measure to be judged upon its merits, and it will be before the session is concluded.

NOT THE PART OF WISDOM.

At no period in the history of this Gov ernment since the popular judgment crushed out Democracy and its misdeeds in 1860-has it been more important than now that Republican principles and the Republican party should be supreme in the administration of its affairs. Nothing short of this will subserve the national peace and welfare, and that man, whether representing popular sentiment individu ally, or through the public press, who throws obstacles in the way of that achievement in the coming Presidential election cannot be counted a just or wise man or a patriot.

In the coming contest the people must have a leader who embodies the true principles of the Republican faith, and who has proved true to Republican, policy under all contingencies. They are now seeking a standard-bearer, and we have no doubt seek only the true interests of the country in this pursuit. The people are intelligent and understand well the history of public events and men, and, if left to their own judgment, will make no mistake in their choice.

In this connection, perhaps, it will not be inappropriate to consider the claims of Mr. Conkling, the candidate of the New York Republicans. No measure looking to the perpetality of the Union, to the advancement of the principles of freedom, to the protection of the rights of man, to the development of the general and individual resources of the country, has been without his championship during all the struggles that have come upon the country since he came upon the stage of action as a public man. For this reason the people of his State delight to honor and trust him, and are now engaged in the work of bringing him to the front as a candidate for the Presidency. Should they succeed in this laudable enterprise, it will be in spite of two able and influential journals in his State. Much to the surprise of the people, whose voice is to decide this question, the New York Times and Harper's Weekly have thrust their formidable prowess upon the track in opposition to what seems to be a popular. if not a unanimous movement in behalf of Senator Conkling's preferment. We are not disposed to examine or impugn motives at this time. These two journals have a right, under the broad principle of freedom of the press, to express their opinion freely and fully, but the part of wisdom would have disrobed these expressions of that bitterness which malignant partisanship too often indulges. The people do not look to the New York Times or to Harper's Journal of Civilization for their estimate of public men or for a sign by which they are to be guided in the discharge of their duties as citizens. The Times may dislike Senator Conkling, and Harper's Weekly may give utterance to its peculiar ideas, molded in personal prejudice, and yet the people will move directly on in their work of selecting a President for the next four years, heedless of their attempts to control their action. The will learn in due time that they can neithe shape nor control the popular judgment. Their utterances will serve but a single purpose in the future. They will be treasured up in the armament of the enemies of the Republican cause to be used, against him who in spite of their revilings has been honored by the people.

This line of policy on the part of journals of acknowledged power is neither wise nor just. They may express preferences, but they should never be betrayed into a line of hostile attack such as has been developed against Senator Conkling during the present canvass for delegates in his State. Not that they have harmed him or his cause, for if they have wielded any power it has evidently been wide from their intention and to his advantage, but they have made for themselves a record that in the future may return to tormen the inventors. It were far better for them selves and for the Republican cause had they never made it, as the future will, no doubt, reveal to their own troubled judgments the Republican party of the Empire State is entitled to a different line of policy from both these journals, having given them the power they possess for good or evil.

BRE. THE CONQUERING HEROES COME. TO INVESTIGATE THE REAL ESTATE

POOL. Perhaps the most notable act of the present House of Representatives has been the appointment of a committee to investigate the Washington real estate pool and the proceedings of that most extraordinary

Let it be understood fully that no one has appeared before Congress to assert that a fraud has been perpetrated, or that it is feared that one will be perpetrated. It is purely a gratuitous examination into the private affairs of individuals against whom no wrong or fraud is alleged. A flimsy pretext was asserted that the committee wish to secure the interests of the Government in case frauds should be found pertaining to Jay Cooke & Co., but the speciousness of the pretext is disclosed by the unequivocal denial of Kilbourn that Jay Cocke & Co. had any interest in the

Admitted, it may be, that a "real estate pool" did or does exist in Washington; that it bought squares of ground, built upon them, sold houses and realized handsome dividends, as it might very properly and fairly do, and with advantage to buyers as well as sellers, which is presumably the case, as none of the "pool" complain of losses, nor does any one who has bought of the "pool" or sold to it assert that a wrong has been perpetrated upon him. In other cities, where individuals or companies have built in like manner, and in buying and selling have not had alleged frauds urged against them, they have been hailed as benefactors. they have gained has been the legitimate result of increased value of property, grow ing out of an economic and judicious expenditure of capital. If such is the fact the uninstructed reader away from Washing ton will say, what is the object of this only two andred and fifty miles; from | Congressional Committee of Investigation It is to throw mud! mud! mud! to mis represent, to defame ! What else can it be

Was there ever a more impertinent assumption of authority? Was there ever a more flagrant disregard of individual rights and violation of individual liberty than the imprisonment of Hallet Kilbourn? When the honest citizens of this broad land fully appreciate this great outrage on individual liberty, whether they are Democrats or Republicans, their breasts will be filled with just indignation. Speaker Kerr might as well have sen Mr. Kilbourn to prison for refusing to deliver the key of his safe to the committee. Either he or some one else is culpable before the law for an unjust, unwarrantable assumption of authority to look into and examine into private affairs, where no allegation of wrong exists against the person. It is simply a monstrous assumption of authority.

A citizen is commanded to bring before the committee many books and valuable deeds -whatever, in fact, concerned his vital interests-and place them at the disposal of entirely irresponsible persons. Should these valuable papers and books be lost to whom would Mr. Kilbourn look for pecuniary redress for the derangement of his business? This demand seems incredible, when coupled with the fact that nobody has accused him or his associates of wrong doing.

The "conquering heroes" have come. During the civil war they came near, but did not enter Washington, unless singly and in disguise. Now they are here, and with the strong arm of privileged and perverted power, aided by their Northern allies, they imprison a citizen without alleging that he has been guilty of fraud, or aught indeed that in any way conflicts with the proper pursuit of his vocation.

EDITORIAL POSTSCRIPT.

General Sherman says that a prominent man can have his boots blacked on a street corner in St. Louis without having the passing multitude eve him into embarrassment, and thus his great attachment for the place.

"Sox," in the Augusta Constitutionalist of a recent date, says it is proposed by the natives of that section to run Beu Hill, jr., on the ticket for the Legislature from Fulton, and, by way of recommendation, that "there never was a smaller bundle of hard sense than young Ben." We infer from the size and quality of the capacity alluded to by "Sox" that young Ben must be a relative of the irrepressible General" of that name.

If "two heads are better than one," a dozen ordinary noddles ought to have in common a sufficiency of brains to arrive at a decision of considerable importance. It is possible that the noddles belonging or attached to the jurors in the Brewer-Clarke case, just decided n Baltimore, were not ordinary ones, but the decision was an important one, at all eventsimportant to the Brewers. We feel justified in saying that no one man, not even either of the Messrs. Brewer, could alone and unsided arrive at a similar conclusion to that of the combined intellect of the jury which they were forgunate enough to have sit on their case The uncontradicted testimony shows that one of the Brewers came unexpectedly on Colonel Clarke and fired a pistol into his head. The ball did not penetrate any vital part, which clearly proves that Mr. Brewer is an excellent shot, as it is not every man who can put a bullet through another's head without serious, if not mortal, injury. Now, the average mind, if left to itself, would not perceive in the action of Mr. Brewer that there was no "intent to kill." A common man would at once suppose that he selection of the head for his target meant business. Not so a dozen men. They delibe rate, they reflect, and in due season conclude hat Mr. B. was perfectly innocent of murlerous intention, and merely endeavored to inflict a mild chastisement upon his victim, which his expertness in the use of firearms enabled him to do satisfactorily. It is to be hoped, however, that the substitution of revolvers for horse-whips will not be come the prevailing fashion in cases where personal chastisement, or as the law calls it, common assault," is the object sought. All pistols are not perfectly true, or they are liable to get out of repair, and perhaps put some worthy gentleman to considerable inconvenience by unexpectedly sending a cartridge into an opponen'ts brain.
